TOWSON, MD.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

Everybody enjoyed Thanksgiving Day, and there was general good cheer all around. It is not remembered that Towson was so quiet for many years. Telegrams state that throughout the country there was full enjoyment of the day. As far as learned no disaster of any kind occurred to mar the pleasures of the day. The next thing to which attention will be directed are the Christmas holidays,—then for about three months the usual "winter of discontent." Let us all endeavor to make it as agreeable as possible by being reasonably agreeable ourselves. This will turn discontent in comparative content and happiness, no matter what Old Boreas may do.

NEW HAMPSHIEF.

It is unfortunate that the State of New Hampshire should be represented in the United States Senate by two such opposite individuals as Senator Blair and Senator Chandler-the one a theosophist, the other an anti-theosophistone cranky but honest, the other who stole the electoral vote of a State and gave it to a political nonentity, and that involves all political turpitude.

It is well known that the Democrats carried New Hampshire at the last election, and have a small majority on joint ballot in the Legislature. Senator Blair's term in the Senate will expire on the 4th of March, 1891. Chandler, his colleague, has determined that as he successfully manipulated Florida in the Tilden campaign he can do so as to New Hampshire in the present instance. But the days of bloodyshirtism and reconstruction in the South does not apply in the granite hills of old New Hampshire at this date. Senator Blair, who may be recognized as curious upon his education of the blacks in the South, has never been credited with attempting to thwart the will of the people of his State. He has not yet descended to the infamy of stealing the vote of a State and making it appear what it is not. But Chandler is at that very kind of work. He revels in that kind of political action, and it is therefore perfectly natural that he should be found trying to make it appear that the Democrats have not a majority in the Legislature. In fact, Chandler seems more concerned about the seat of Blair than that gentleman is himself. Mr. Blair seems to take the expression of the will of the people at the late election as in the order of events, and no one supposes he wishes to continue to hold his seat in the Senate except by a fair tenure. He may want from seventy to a hundred millions of money thrown away in the education of the blacks in the Southern States, but he would not wish to hold his seat in the Senate to ride that hobby upon a falsified record of the vote of his State, no matter if it was forced to be made to appear otherwise. Would not Senator Blair be heard from if he did not believe that there was scandal to his State by Chandler trying to falsify its record? He is quiet about it.

ORATORIO CONCERT.

Their first extra Concert of the season was given by the Oratorio Society of Baltimore last Tuesday evening, and was highly enjoyed by the music lovers of Baltimore and its vicinity.

The chief feature of the evening consisted of solo performances, on the piano, by the acknowledged artist, Mr. Franz Rummel; whose program was composed of more than half a dozen selections from almost as many of our finest and most famous composers. Mr. Rummel's great reputation led his audience to expect a great deal of him, quite all of which his opening number did not seem to justify. But after he warmed up to his work the shadow of a threatened disappointment vanished from the faces of his audience, and his fine touch and brilliant execution were thoroughly en joyed, and highly applauded.

The great interest of the occasion, however centered in the performances of the Society's recently reconstructed Chorus. Baltimoreans are only beginning to comprehend that this Society is an institution with regard to which they are justified in feeling a vast amount of towering pride. So a project for its reorganization was naturally a source of considerable anxiety to those who were desirous for it sustain its well-earned reputation for artistic

But all fear on this score was happily dissipated by the revelations of this season's first Concert of the Society. On this occasion the work of the Chorus was, to be sure, very limited in its extent, for it gave only three little fragments of song as its share of the evening's entertainment. Those bits, however, were most convincing proofs of the great skill and power, the sweetness and fine intelligent force. which the Society has now at its command; as which it will do when it displays its ability, further on, in the Oratorio proper.

Chorus, Baltimore has fine promise of some rare treats this winter, for which it should, at least, be practically appreciative. SIOUX INDIANS "GHOST DANCES

The air is again sulphurous with news of the about annual uprising of the troublesom Sioux Indians, alleging that Old Sitting Bull is plotting mischief, &c. Gen. Miles, who commands the Department of the Pacific, has troops in readiness to quell any outbreak. It is stated that the Indians are having what are called "ghost dances," alleged to be produced by the expected coming of an Indian "Messish." It is further stated that a young and intelligent Indian has been going about among the tribes and teaching them the story of Christ and his life, which has been the cause of the "ghost dances."

If the matter is looked into closely it will quite likely be found that the "ghost dances" are caused by the faithlessness of Indian Agents and Post Traders who usually succeed in giving the Indians short allowance, and failure to pay government money ordered. It is stated that the $14,000,000 ordered paid the Sioux for the last cession of their territory is the real cause of the "ghost dances." which usually precede an uprising. Old Sitting Bull is merely trying to get what is due him, and that is no doubt why he is dancing. As soon as Uncle Sam executes his "ghost dance" and planks down the $14,000,000 and the provisions he agrees to give Sitting Bull, the Indian "ghost dance" will cease. The noble red man is no fool by a long shot.

TO WALK THE PLANK. It has been decreed that one of the result of the late Democratic cyclone, and one of "swift retribution," is, that all Democrats, "good, bad and indifferent," are to be made to "walk the plank," We are not very much surprised on account of the aforesaid Democrats, as Democrats, that they are to be turned out, because we all know what a splendid civilservice reformer President Harrison is. It i cruelty, however, that mechanics employed in the Navy Yard at Washington are to be sent adrift at the threshold of winter because they happened to have voted the Democratic ticket. It is the fate of political war, however, and no good Democrat should or will growl. But the Democrats did not behave so when Grover Cleveland was President. The Philadelphia Press says the offices are an element of weakness to the Republican party. There are an awful number of Republicans after these weaknesses, however.

THE RECENT DEMOCRATIC VICTORY.

Veiws of Ex-Senator Bayard on the Result. A week or so since the Democracy of Savan nab, Georgia, celebrated the recent victory. and addressed the Hon. Thos. F. Bayard, requesting his presence. He was unable to respond in person but sent a letter giving his views on the result as follows: "It is not possible for me to be with you, but I vill thank you to express to my fellow-Democrats in Savannah my sincere congratulations upon the unmistakable arrest placed by the American people upon the Republican leaders in their headlong and solent march toward arbitrary power. Such an expression of popular sentiment reinvigorates the hope of all lovers of civil liberty and popular self-government, and proclaims the vitality of the Democratic principle upon which the best hopes of our government are founded. I carnestly hope that the representatives of the party which, a year hence, will be placed in control of the House of depresentatives, will comprehend the true significance of the late elections The Republican party and its policies have been ondemned, and power transferred to Democratic hands; but it is placed there in trust, in the confiand conscientiously. If it is not, it will be recalled I know of no more wholesome instruction for olitical parties in this country than the constant eminder that they are always on trial before the country, and at each election must stand for judg-ment at the bar of an intelligent public opinion. The Republican party seems to have forgotten this, and to have become besotted with power and lulled to insensibility by its long possession and consequent abuse. Therefore they believed public conscience was lead when it was only sleeping, and they conceived that they could entrench themselves permanently in power by arbritrary statutes, and that popular disavor could not expel them. They have had a sudden and unexpected awakening, and I trust their successors will gather wisdom and instruction from their downfali Let us hope the Democratic majority of the next House of Representatives will not forget the condi tions upon which popular confidence cau be retained for underrate their great responsibilities. The plain duty of an American representative is o base his popularity upon absolute fidelity to his onstituency, and this begins in that personal dignity and solf-respect that may possibly compol him to displease his constituents, but never to mislead sentative is a safeguard of the greatest value to his people. A subservient creature can be no true friend nor trustworthy agent in any relations of life, The present overthrow of the Republican party i manifestly due to the lack of personal independence in opinion and action of its leaders, who sinned against light, and led their party, or suffered it to be d. to its downfall. Not a manly or true voice was heard in the House or in the Senate during the late session from the Republican side to warn their party against extreme neasures, or to denounce with just indignation the lestructive and un-American rules of Reed or his ffensive and brutal methods of administration. There were a few and faint expostulations against some features of the McKinley bill among the Republicans, but they were smothered and stifled by noral cowardice and want of confidence in popular ntelligence. I hope, indeed, that the incoming ers of Democratic administration, upon the threshold of which we are now apparently standing, may be marked by individual independence of opinion and action, and that the spirit of party may never be allowed to cow the spirit of American manhood nor silence the voice of individual conviction. Political parties are but agencies for popular gov ernment, and men are the instrumentalities through which parties must achieve their ends. Therefore in the last annalysis of covernment, whether of a party or a nation, the personal character of the meu chosen will prove to be the safest reliance of the people who trust them. Now is the time, therefore, for the National Democracy to send demagogues to the rear and call ove the people, but do not fear or distrust them—to

A boy in New York named Gethius suffered with a malformation of the bones of the log just above the ankle joint, there being a vacancy between the upper and lower bone. The surgeons at Charity Hospital on Blackwell's Island determined to take a Spaniel dog, cut off a pertion of the foreleg of the dog and unite the bone of the dog with the bone of the boy's leg. To do this the surgeons found it necessary to leave some portion of the skin of the dog's leg fast between the dog's leg and bone of his foot, so that there should be circulation of blood about the bones from the dog to the boy, consequently the surgeons placed the leg of the boy and the dog and his foot in a plaster splint, so that a movement of either would be prevented. The operation was entirely successful, both the boy and the dog are doing well, and both partaking of food with a relish. The boy and dog have now been bound together for two weeks and there is every indication that the bones of the boy and that of the dog's leg will knit together. The boy has taken great delight with the dog and says be will take good care of him for the future. It is a wonderful operation and shows to what perfection surgical science has been brought. The New York Herald of the 25th has the

WANT MORE TROUBLE. The more bitter and reckless Republicans still hanker for the passage of the Force bill. They seem to have learned nothing from the recent defeat. It looks like a drowning man grasping at a straw. The passage of the bill would but add poignancy to their grief in 1892. For, let it be understood, the people generally have put their seal of tremendous condemnation upon the attempt of the Republicans to retain power by any other means than that of well as sure prophecies of the wonderful work | their freely expressed will. There never was a time when they were more in carnest about it. But if they are bent on raising a wind they will have to look out when the next cyclone strikes them. There will be precious few of them left to tell the tale.

HON. JOHN L. THOMAS OPINION No one will claim that ex-Representative John L. Thomas has been anything but a consistent Republican and an honorable, patriotic gentleman. On Monday whilst in Washington upon legal business the Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun chatted with Mr. Thomas, who said of the recent election Reviewing the political situation in Maryland, and especially in the city of Baltimore, from a Repub lican standpoint, Mr. Thomas said the party is i very bad shape. The present administration, says, made a mistake in the distribution of the Federal patronage, disregarding the wishes and sugrestions of men who have fought and labored for he Republican party for the past twenty five years The party, said Mr. Thomas, is divided into fac ions, and there is but slight prospect of harmon; under the existing circumstances. Many of the ablest and best men in the party differed with the national leaders with regard to the Force bill and Cariff bill. Men who have heretofore worked and talked for the party at every election for years past would not act against their principles, and remained out of the campaign. For the first time in thirty years, Mr. Thomas says, he refused to take the stump for the Rupublican party. Unless the Republicans retrace their steps and hearken to the voice of the ### people, he thinks they may be confronted with a similar landslide in 1892. IRISH HOME RULE.

The Irish Nationalists in the English Parlia ment have re-elected Mr. Parnell as leader in the Home Rule contest, notwithstanding Mr Parnell's compromised social position. Mr Gladstone has announced that if Mr. Parnell is to continue the leader of Home Rule he (Mr. Gladstone) will not act longer as the leader of the English Liberal party, which is favorable to Irish Home Rule. Mr. Parnell's compromised position cannot but do great harm to the Irish cause. The moral effect of Mr. Parnell's unenviable social position does not seem to have much weight with his Irish friends. Parnell's predicament is but a small ripple when the long debauched life of William III., the recently deceased King of Holland, is taken into consideration. Other crowned heads of Europe are in likewise disreputable position. and they seem to regard it as no disgrace.

The Vermont Legislature has adopted the Australian ballot form of voting, with a proviso that the tickets for use shall be printed in each town of not less than 4,000 inhabitants, or by the counties, instead of by the in spite of the fact that they are, and must re-State authorities.

CHICAGOS WORLD EXPOSITION.

Mr. J. B. Campbell, manager of the World's Columbian Correspondence Bureau, furnishes the annexed data of the coming World's Fair, to begin 1892 at Chicago. The city of Chicago having voted $5,000,000 and the citizens supplying an additional $5,000,000, President Har- | tem. as follows: rison will now be enabled to issue his proclamation to the nations of the world inviting them to participate: The election is over and the Directors of the World's Columbian Exposition are now placed on a solid footing. Chicago has voted $5,000,000 for the dvancement of the enterprise the nation entrusted o her management. The $10,000,000 is now secured for the advancement of the Fair. The contract with the National Government is fulfilled. All and more than was ever anticipated will now be successfull carried out. The result demonstrates that the citizens are unanimous in their determination to have the greatest Exposition the world has yet seen. President Harrison will now be enabled to issue his nvitation to the nations of the earth to come and participate. Progress from this date will be rapid. I number of important questions hinged upon and had to await the election. This fact was not generally known, In the meantime all possible preparations were being made and all the wheels will now be set in motion and each department put actively with its espective work. Col. Corbin's idea of a grand military encampment has been elaborated upon by Secretary Dickinson, and recommended by the Classification Comnittee. The plan is to have a vast Inter-State and International military encampment and band con-test at the dedication of the buildings, epening the first Monday in October '92, and holding until after the 12th, Enormous prizes will be offered. It is expected all the first military organizations and bands of music in the United States, together with at least a military escort and band of music from every nation on the earth will participate. It will prove the greatest military and musical event of the ge, and will open the ball of the great International contest. Prof. W. L. Tomlin's proposition to have trained chorus of 1,000 children give a series of entertainments at the Fair has also been officially accepted. The children are already being put in To reduce expenses the committees have been dismissed and their work will be done by eleven bureaus. Those performing the work of the Na-tional Commission will be paid by the Federal Gov-ernment, and the others from funds of the Local ernment, and the others from funds of the Local Directory. Speaking of expenses and salaries, figures at best are dry, but to answer questions that come to headquarters from every point of the compass, excuse us if we drop a few here. The salary list of the Board of Directors reaches about $80,000 per annum. Of this President Gage gets $6,000 - Vice-President Bryan, $12,000; Secretary Butterworth, $10,000. The National Commission's salary list reaches $200,000 per annum. Of this sum that ist reaches $200,000 per annum. Of this sum the Director General gets $15,000; President, $12,000; Secretary, $10,000; Vice-Chairman, $8,000. The re mainder goes for sundry expenses.

It is now estimated by the Classification Commitee, judging from the Centennial and Paris Exposition, that it will require eleven main buildings accommodate the exhibits of the twelve departnents of the Exposition spoken of in our last letter covering areas as follows : Departments. -Agricultural Hall... -Horticultural Hall...... C-Live Stock..... 100 Fisheries..... E-Mineral Palace..... '—Machinerv Hall..... 20 G-Transportation ..... -Electrical Palace (besides open space) -Manufacturers Palace..... K-Fine Art Gallery..... L and M-One Building.....

BEAUTIFUL MEMORIAL WINDOWS Within the past week two memorial windows have been placed in St. Paul's Church, Baltimore, which for beauty of design and workmanship are not to be surpassed, if equalled, in America. They are memorials to the late Mr. John Sterett Gittings and Hon. George Hawkins Williams. The window to Mr. Gittings is in three panels, and represents scenes from the life of King David-the first, David killing Goliath; the second, David playing before Saul, and the third, the bringing home of the Ark of the Covenant in triumph. The second window, to Mr. Williams, represents St. Michael and All Angels. The central figure is of St. Michael attacking the Dragon. and behind are the Heavenly Host. The coland are most suggestive of the medieval glass, were made and designed by the world-renowned firm of Clayton & Bell, who made all the glass for the Albert Chapel at Windsor Castle. Mr. Bell was a pupil of the late Sir Gilbert Scott, who restored this chapel for the Queen.

_____ THE NAVASSA ISLAND MURDERERS.

The Supreme Court of the United States having rendered its decision that Navassa Island was within the jurisdiction of the United States and that the twenty-nine colored men who were tried in the United States Circuit Court at Baltimore for murder was legal, it leaves no hope for Henry Jones, George Singleton Key and Edward Smith, convicted of murder in the first degree, and they will likely be hanged in the yard of the Baltimore City Jail under the direction of United States Marshal Wm. F. Airey. The decision of the Court removes every legal obstacle to their execution. A number were convicted of manslaughter and others of riot and are now serving out terms of imprisonment. It will be remembered the murders were of the most awfully brutal charactor, and the murderers deserve no mercy. The white officers after being surrounded and disarmed were killed in cold blood by the age. black demons. A pistol, an iron bar, a broadaxe, clubs and stones were the instruments used by the infuriated murderers. Efforts will be made by Mr. John Henry Keene, counsel. with President Harrison for a commutation of

A PAPER ON TRUSTS.

At the recent Episcopal Congress held in Philadelphia, Pa., Mr. Joseph Packard, Jr., a well-known lawyer of Baltimore, made an address on "Trusts," which was a clear, forcible and concise statement of the evils of the sys-He said, "there is much truth in the old French accusation against them.

For instance, we are told that they are simply the result of the application of modern principles of business. To many people this is quite a sufficient excuse. Such people have as blind a reverence for what they call business principles as the African has for his fetich. But the discriminating mind will not take for granted that a principle is good merely because it is a so-called business principle for, while business may be, and often is, conducted on principles of the highest morality, yet many popularly-received rules of business cannot stand such a test. Such rules are based on selfishness pure and simple. There are certain phases of elfishness which the law treats as crime; there are others quite as bad in the forum of conscience which are often regarded as proper enough in a business way. For a man to get all he can for himself and let other people look out for themselves finds large acceptance as a business principle, but it may be pushed to a point where it is morally un-distinguishable from burglary.

Again, we are asked why in these days of coeration it is worse for capitalist producers to comlue than for laborer producers. The object of the combination must be the test. In criminal law a combination for certain objects is known as a conspiracy. Combinations for other objects may be quite as bad morally, even though the public conscience has not yet reached the point of framing penal statutes against them. The chief object of the combinations known as trusts, is, in brief, to secure a monopoly of a given product, that is, to get a price for it that has no proper relation to the cost of production, or to fair profits, or to the rights of consumers, but is limited only by the greed of the producer on the one hand and the need of the consumer on the other. If you ask too much the consumer will do without it, but up to that point get all that you can-that is the result that is arrived at in a monopoly. Of course it is permissible for a man to fix his own price upon a gem, a horse, a house, or to fix what he deems a ompensation for his taste or skill or labor. The purchaser or employer may accept his valuation or not, as he pleases. But this is quite a different thing from managing to control the whole supply of a needed article, so as to be able to put one's own price upon it without fear of competition.— This has always offended the moral sense of civilzed people, because it has been felt that no man in such a position can be trusted to do justly. It is repugnant to the same sense of fair dealing which prescribes that he man shall be judged in his own

There are two ways in which this control of the market can be acquired. The first is by the actual purchasing of the whole supply of some necessary f life that can be had within certain limits of time r space. This is what we call 'cornering' the market, and what our ancestors use to call forestalling or 'engrossing.' It seems to have been in their eyes a hateful offense, for it was punished by fire, and in case of repetition of the offense o monopolizing the supply of provisions, by cutting off an ear of the offender. The man who would take a base advantage of his fellows was to be a marked man, as, in the East, the baker of light weight loaves was made to leave one of his cars nailed to his shop door The other method was to obtain by loyal or legis-lative grant—as in the days of the Tudors and earlier—the exclusive privilege of making or sellug a given article. This was a far more convenien nethod than the other for the monopolist. Of course, it was much less troublesome to shut up other markets by law than to buy them out, and thorities was likewise less. The effects upon the unfortunate consumer seem to have been, however, quite as exasperating, and the memory of their wrongs was handed down to their children's chil-Many of the forms of the Declarations of Rights set forth by the old thirteen States contain a statement substantially similar to that still found in the Maryland instrument—that 'monopolies are dious, contrary to the spirit of a free government and the principles of commerce. Now, the modern monopolies the trusts have been shrewd enough to work by a combination of both of these methods. In the first place, by all sorts of devious methods they secure protection their product against competition by any foreign producer, and then, having thus limited the area of competition, they proceed to control the domesic market so that prices can be fixed to suit them selves. In this part of the plan they practice-in rather an incidental way, so to speak—one of the nost high handed of their infractions of right.-The pursuit of happiness, which is spoken of as one of the inalienable rights of man, has a close connection with the right of a man to pursue his own lawful business in his own way. But a trust will step in and convey to an ouisider an intimation to this effect: 'You must come into our ring or we will break you up; we have a large surplus fund; we will sell goods that you make at less than cost to all your customers until we have ruined you. It is the old cry of the pirate, Join the band, r walk the plank. Such are some of the doings of the trusts which have awakened the people to the necessity of seeing justice done in their case. This is not the place, nor is there time on this occasion to discuss remedial measures. But it is important to insist that public opinion must be educated to see that there are great moral questions involved. If the American can people are once made to see that a great wrong s being done there will be a power evoked suffi cient to make the necessary laws, and to see that they are enforced when they are made. here are fashions in crimes as in other things.-There have been times when life was too highly esteemed; there have been times when liberty was most sinned against. It seems now as though crimes against property are most in vogue, though apacity now takes different shape from what it did the olden time. Then the picture was of the bold baron watching from his stronghold on the hill for the peaceful merchant trains to come in sight along the road through the defile, and at his pleasure pouncing down on them and helping himself liberally from their freights, or perhaps, accept ing blackmail in cash for the liberty to pass unmoles ed all the while doing what he could to keep on the right side of the public opinion of the time by liberal gifts for the building or endowment of church or monastery. Nowadays the predatory instinct in man shuns udo methods; it abhors cold steel or gunpowder. the modern robber on the large scale is a quiet man in ordinary dress, who probably never carried a weapon in his life. His evil work is done for him by the legislator who has been elected by the votes which his money has bought, and he salves his conscience by refusing to know exactly what votes were sold and delivered. That he gets what he wants in the way of legislation, and so has his mouey returned to him with interest is all that he taking by force that to which one has no right; matters not whether the force is private or is the public force of ministers of the law set in motion by corrupt influence of the Legislature or the courts. We have the authority of the Supreme Court for the position that there is such a thing as robbery under the forms of law.' Our people must be brought to a point whence hey can see that such conduct as this is criminal, and meanly criminal at that. It was always held times before the civil war that there was a tain ipon a fortune which had been acquired through he traffic in human beings; later, the 'shoddy fortune which had been picked up at the expense of the shivering soldiers in the field was looked ipon with deserved contempt. We must see to i that the beneficiaries of corrupt and corrupting trusts hold their proper place in the eyes of community. No conspicuous public gifts should be allowed to divert attention from the nature their misdoings. The gentle footpad who robs us on the highway may considerately leave us some-thing for a night's lodging and a breakfast; it somewhat alleviates our loss, but it does not con lone his crime. The robber spirit which is abroad must be put down if we would have our country a good place

o live in. A people is in an evil case when it sets its affections upon some Barab bas.
